If you've never been to the Airman & Family Readiness Center (A&FRC) before, you may be unsure of what to expect. The following information is offered for you to consider and, if you wish, to discuss with a staff member. The A&FRC is here to assist you in a variety of ways. We can help customers prioritize their concerns and needs and assist them in understanding what resources may enable them to cope with personal and work related situations. Many people have learned that talking with a qualified, objective, third party is very helpful when confronting a new or stressful situation. The A&FRC offers classes and workshops and a resource room with books and computers that you may find very helpful. Although the Airman and Family Readiness Center (A&FRC) respects your right to privacy, staff members do not have privileged communication. If your supervisor/commander/first sergeant made the appointment for you to come to the A&FRC, we may provide general feedback to that person, but will not ordinarily go into specific detail about your situation. Air Force policy requires any A&FRC staff member to contact proper authorities regarding any statement made or information disclosed by a client that pertains to any violation or possible violation of AFI 40-301, the Family Advocacy Program, or admission of a crime in violation of the Uniformed Code of Military Justice and federal/state law. You will be asked to provide demographic information, which is electronically stored (and secured). The record contains demographic information, a brief description of your visit(s), and your service plan. Records are maintained for the sole purpose of assisting you as the customer. Chief, Airman and Family Readiness Center
